Her Legacy… Captola Denise Rindlisbacher, at the young age of 50, went home to the Lord March 14th. Born in Oroville, to Scotty Stayton and Myrtie Frances Moore on October 31st 1962, Captola, or as many knew her Denise or Niecy, had a heart of gold. She loved animals, namely elephants, gardening, and most of all shopping, but more than these hobbies, more than anything else, she loved her family and friends. Captola married her husband, Michael, of 30 years June 12th 1982, and it is clear to all that had the pleasure of being there, that this was one of the three happiest days of her life. The glow is clear to those who weren't there in every picture of that day, and through the gleaming way she described it. To those who knew Captola, her smile was like that of a child, pure and sincere, and her intentions were always out of love. The second happiest day of her life came when her first child, Valente Joseph Sagaribay was born, October 2nd 1979, which was then followed by his tragic passing, December 17th 1979. The third happiest day of her life came on March 31st 1986 when her daughter, Rachel Marie, came into this world. More than anything else, she wanted to be a mother, and in doing so, she found the love a child has for their mother in many places. Regina Lapriore, Alisha Lapriore, and Ty Ronquillo came into her life to complete the family that she cherished so immensely.

Her Family… She is survived by a huge family, both blood and otherwise, and many friends, that meant everything to her.

How can I help you to say goodbye?
