A Loved One
In Memory of Papa
Feeling Different, Feeling Strange,
Feeling Broken, Feeling Dead.
The pain that leaves nothing, just a body to hurt
As the heart breaks with wounded pain,
While crimson blood spills.
Even as the night was filled with the sorrow and pain we felt
through the tears we shed showed our care
The words we spoke told our love.
As the time goes on the pain will fade, and our hearts will heal.
But the one thing we have left are the memories we all shared.

THE DAY A LOVED ONE DIED
By Linda Dittmar, Granddaughter

Survived by wife Karen Dalrymple of Oroville; daughters, Anita Wells Dittmar and Sondra Robles both of Oroville; son, Guy Dalrymple of Healdsburg; and granddaughter, Linda Dittmar.
Ronnie Ray Dalrymple
“Papa”

October 13, 1946
January 5, 2008

A Loved One
In Memory of Papa
Feeling Different, Feeling Strange,
Feeling Broken, Feeling Dead.
The pain that leaves nothing, just a body to hurt
As the heart breaks with wounded pain,
While crimson blood spills.
Even as the night was filled with the sorrow and pain we felt
through the tears we shed showed our care
The words we spoke told our love.
As the time goes on the pain will fade, and our hearts will heal.
But the one thing we have left are the memories we all shared.

THE DAY A LOVED ONE DIED
By Linda Dittmar, Granddaughter

Survived by wife Karen Dalrymple of Oroville; daughters, Anita Wells Dittmar and Sondra Robles both of Oroville; son, Guy Dalrymple of Healdsburg; and granddaughter, Linda Dittmar.